

Speaker Bio: Peisong Han is Associate Professor in the Department of Biostatistics. His primary research interests include (i) missing data and biased sampling problems in public health studies and survey sampling, (ii) data integration, especially when summary information is available for some studies and individual-level data are available for others, and (iii) longitudinal (correlated/clustered) data analysis. Interdisciplinary collaborations include bipolar disorder research and kidney disease quality measure development, maintenance and support.