

Artificial intelligence has achieved remarkable success in clinical research. However, only a small number of AI models have been successfully translated into real-world clinical practice. In this presentation, several AI-based clinical applications will be introduced to demonstrate how AI models can be transformed into deployable clinical products and integrated into routine clinical workflows.